

The Thinking Environment in Higher Education: A Day of Practice and Discovery

Hello, my name is Andrew Scott and I'm a member of the Time to Think global faculty and also the convenor of a small informal group of people who meet from time to time to discuss how they're applying the Thinking Environment in Higher Education and it was out of conversations in that group that this day of practice and discovery was born. So I'll be facilitating the first session of the day and we'll be looking at two questions:

1) why are we here?

2) how are we going to work together?

So I'll be sharing a little bit about why we're running today but we'll also be inviting you to think about why you are here with colleagues and hear why they're here too and of course we'll do that using Thinking Environment approaches.

So I'll explain how those work and that answers the second question: How are we going to work together? Because every session will have significant opportunities for all participants to think together about the ideas to being shared by colleagues who are using the Thinking Environment in various ways in Higher Education.

So I'm really looking forward to seeing you on the day which I think you'll find both useful and enjoyable. I'm hoping I do too.